

DEHYDRATED SKIN AND CLEANSING

Lets start to feel revived and fresh, with the winter slowly approaching too soon!

After all the hot weather we have had and the air conditioning on, having high sun exposure our skins are feeling very dehydrated.

First of all we all need to be drinking more water. Water helps to flush the toxins from our body and keep our skin hydrated.

It is extremely important to cleanse your skin every night to remove make-up, impurities, dead skin cells, and excess oil.

But a morning cleanse is also beneficial, as it removes any toxins the skin eliminates during the night, refreshes and hydrates the skin.

80% of women do not use toners, why? Because people do not understand the benefits of a toner after rinsing their cleansing milk, wash or foam with water.

The original use of a toner is to return the skin's pH back to normal, keeping the skin hydrated. It is also useful to complete the cleansing process, as it will remove any last traces of make-up and cleanser residue.

Your skin doesn't stop at your face. Think about how dry our skin on our body can become, especially if we have been in the sun, swimming, had a dip in the sea.

The reason we exfoliate our face it to allow the beautiful creams to penetrate and do there job right? So isn't it the same for our body? Of course it is!

The best routine anyone can have is to exfoliate in the bath or the shower, dermatologists say that applying cream after bathing or showering is the most beneficial time to do so as all pores are still open and the skin is able to trap the water and use it to hydrate the skin.
